Points discussed:

GROUP - I	GROUP - II
At present, all rivers and lakes in India are in the authority of respective state government.	In some areas, industrial waste have been disposing in rivers.
Flood and drought conditions will be prevented.	The polluted water has been spread all over the country.
Some fertile lands are wasting because of lack of water facility.	It requires lakhs of acres of land.
Water have been moving to the sea. By connecting the rivers, we can redirect to dry places.	Instead of nationalizing all the rivers, we should make people aware of water saving methods such as preserving the rain water etc.
As there is the difference in height of lands, we can generate power in this project if we plan to do so	National Integrity is not just possible by nationalizing rivers, it has to come from beneath.
Many will get employment during the project and also after completion of the project for maintaining purpose.
We can avoid the fights between states.

Conclusion:-

Water resources should be nationalized to solve all water problems in India. It's better if we plan the path through barren lands. So that, there will be no wastage of fertile lands. Govt. should take necessary steps to stop the dumping of industrial wastage in rivers.

Digital banking allows customers to perform transactions and manage their finances anytime, anywhere, through mobile apps or websites. This accessibility reduces the need to visit physical bank branches, saving time and effort for busy individuals.	As digital transactions increase, so do concerns about cyber security. Customers and banks face risks such as phishing attacks, malware, and data breaches. Ensuring robust security measures and educating users about safe practices are critical to mitigate these risks.
Digital banking is the ability to transfer funds instantly between accounts. This feature is particularly beneficial for businesses and individuals who need to make urgent payments or manage cash flow efficiently	While digital banking offers convenience in urban areas, rural areas may face challenges due to poor internet connectivity or lack of access to digital infrastructure.
